of actors who gave performances during the holiday celebrations of different religions. It was quite natural that every ninja in the guise of an actor, musician, or monk possessed adequate skills to make the disguise more believable. Thus, ninjas were musicians and actors; they were familiar with classic literature; they were intellectuals from Buddhist and Shinto temples.

Fudo Myōō, a statue of the deity, traditionally recognized as the guardian of Yamabushi monks. Bodhisattwa Fudo is stable; his mind is always "unmoved" and not susceptible to temptation of the world.

Yoroi – medieval samurai armor. The copies shown are displayed at the main Bujinkan Dojo. Some combat techniques were designed to be used in cases when an opponent wore armor.

Sensei Sumeia presents a fighting form with the heavy halberd. Bisento and naginata (a lighter version) were the favorite weapons of Yamabushi monks.

Samurai armor from the 18th century. On the breastplate we can see the Tokugawa family coat of arms. The Tokugawa family was one of the most significant and influential clans in the history of Japan. Shoguns from the Tokugawa dynasty often used the support of ninja warriors.
